

FROM THE Renaissance
TO THE REVOLUTION

History Disguised as Fiction

WILLIAM C. MCMILLIN

available at amazon

This book is the story of five contiguous seventy-five year periods of history. They start in 1404 with the demise of the Middle Ages and end in 1779 with the beginnings of the Age of Enlightenment. In between, they contain the European Renaissance and the Scientific Revolution. Not your usual history book, however. My autobiography titled "It's All About Me" has a subtitle "A Rather Ordinary Life in Some Extraordinary Times." This book tells the story of each of those seventy-five year periods through the eyes of a fictional character who lived a rather ordinary life in those extraordinary times. The book focuses more on the How and Why of history and not so much on the What, When, Where, and Who. The How and Why are always more interesting, and the others are included when needed to help complete the picture. Enjoy the ride.

This book is the story of five contiguous seventy-five year periods of history. They start in 1404 with the demise of the Middle Ages and end in 1779 with the beginnings of the Age of Enlightenment. In between, they contain the European Renaissance and the Scientific Revolution. Not your usual history book, however. My autobiography titled "It's All About Me" has a subtitle "A Rather Ordinary Life in Some Extraordinary Times." This book tells the story of each of those seventy-five year periods through the eyes of a fictional character who lived a rather ordinary life in those extraordinary times. The book focuses more on the How and Why of history and not so much on the What, When, Where, and Who. The How and Why are always more interesting, and the others are included when needed to help complete the picture. Enjoy the ride.

WILLIAM C. (BILL) MCMILLIN was born in West Texas, grew up in East Texas, and spent most of his adult life working in the Dallas area. In 1950, he obtained a BS degree in Aeronautical Engineering from Texas A&M College. His career included forty-eight years in the aerospace business, interrupted with a tour of about two years with the US Army's Second Armored Division in Germany. His business career included working on aircraft, missile, and civilian and military space programs. After retirement in 1998, he stayed busy doing volunteer work and various writing projects, including a book titled "It's All About Me," an autobiography of the first seventy-five years of his life. He has been married to his wife, Nancy, since 1962. They have two children and four grandchildren, all of whom are still working on their first seventy-five years.

Other book by the author:

It's All About Me